

The Daily Courant.

Saturday, December 21. 1706.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated Dec. 24?

Berlin, Dec. 14.

THE Court went to Charlottenbourg the 4th of this Month, and great Feasting and Rejoycings were made there for the Consummation of the Marriage of the Prince Royal with the Electoral Princess of Hanover. On Wednesday last the whole Court return'd hither, and the next Day in the Evening one of the finest Artificial-Fireworks that ever was seen was plaid off. The Margrave Philip William General of the Artillery had the Direction of it; and Collonel Schlunten commanded some Hundreds of Gunners, Bombardiers, &c. This Firework was erected in the Fredericstad. His Majesty and the whole Court repair'd to a Wooden House built purposely on the Rampart, to see the Firework plaid off; but there was more Smoke than Flame, and the Wind drove towards that House, so that his Majesty could not have a distinct View of the Devices, &c. In coming and going his Majesty was saluted with a Discharge of 30 Pieces of Cannon which were plac'd for that Occasion on the Ramparts. On Friday a new Opera was perform'd in the Palace, at which the Prince and Princess, and the whole Court, were present. The 26th there are to be great Illuminations, which 'tis said will conclude the Rejoycings for this Marriage.

The following Letter was written by the States General to the King of Sweden, when he was about to Invade Saxony: Tho' it did not come to our Hands till after the unexpected Turn of the Affairs of Saxony and Poland, yet we cannot but think it worth preserving.

Most Serene and most Potent King,

THO' we can hardly believe your Royal Majesty has taken any Resolution to invade Saxony or other Territories in Germany subject to the King of Poland, yet the Rumour of such a Design is so general, and there are so many Advices that your Royal Majesty has some such Intention, that we know not well what to think; Especially since not only the Senate who during the King's Absence have the Administration of the Government of Saxony, but other Princes of the Empire have signified to us the Uneasiness which the Approach of your Troops to the Frontiers of Saxony and Silesia, joyn'd with the publick Reports, has given them. Wherefore we judge it the shortest and surest Way to address ourselves to your Royal Majesty, in whose Friendship we have always put the greatest Confidence; with a firm Assurance, that as your Royal Majesty has hitherto had Regard to the Desires and Interests of Us and the Allies, so you will not now enter hostily Saxony and other Territories of the Empire, but by your favourable Answer will give us hope that out of the same Regard you will forbear doing it hereafter, and that you have no Thought nor will entertain any of changing the Seat of War and carrying it into Germany; which would be more prejudicial to us and all those who with united Arms are at this Time contending for the common Welfare of Europe, than it might be to the King of Poland and his Affairs: For by so unlook'd for an Occurrence, we should be depriv'd of very great Assistance, it being to be presum'd not only that the King of Poland would recall his Troops which serve on the Rhine in the due Defence of the Empire, but that the like would be done by other Princes and States who may either think themselves oblig'd by Virtue of Alliances to defend Saxony, or seeing a new Fire of War broke out in Germany, and raging in their Neighbourhood, may look upon themselves as immediately concern'd in it, and judge they ought to take Care, least while they are one Way employ'd for the general Good, they may suffer private Damage another. By this 'tis manifest how great a Number of the Troops of the Allies would be drawn off from the War with France, to turn their Arms against your Royal Majesty's Forces; and 'tis easy to perceive how advantageous this would be to the French, who are endeavouring to enslave all Europe, and how prejudicial to us and our Allies who are strenuously vindicating the common Liberty. When we consider these things, and at the same Time call to Mind, how earnestly your Royal Majesty always favour'd the Cause of the Allies, and that you have never given any Sign of your having chang'd your Inclination, that besides we are strictly engag'd with your Royal Majesty in Alliances, by Virtue of which we should certainly receive Assistance and Succour from you in this War against France, were you not taken up by another War; We cannot persuade our selves your Royal Majesty will undertake an Expedition so contrary to ours and the general Interest, and thereby do so much Prejudice to Us, who with Others when our Hands were at Liberty, did in the Beginning of this War in which your Royal Majesty has gain'd immortal Glory by your many Victories, so cheerfully and readily give you faithful and not unpro-
